About the F-Word

The F-Word is a bilingual publication written, edited and produced by young women between the ages of 15 and 29 years old who work and volunteer at the Canadian Research Institute for the Advancement of Women (CRIA W). The F-Word is comprised of feminist articles, analyses, reviews, personal stories, poetry, photography, and art submissions from young women from across the country. This publication's goal is to serve as a platform to give young women an opportunity to express their thoughts and priorities regarding women's equality in Canada.

▸ Written contributions should be under 700 words for individual authors, or up to 1,400 words for collaborative pieces.

COVID-19 Edition

It is hard not to be inundated with COVID-19. All around us life has changed considerably. CRIA W wants to know what young women under 30 are thinking, saying, feeling and creating during the pandemic for the upcoming edition of the F-Word.

Has COVID-19 affected your studies, employment or housing situation? Has this been a challenging time to be physically away from your friends and the regular hustle and bustle? Has COVID-19 allowed for positive reconnections, healing or needed down-time? Have you had to chance to use this time to create art or discover something new about yourself? Or maybe you have spent some time thinking through how COVID-19 impacts others? What could the world be doing better? What has inspired you?

We want to hear from you. Share your analysis, art or photography with us for the upcoming edition of the F-Word! Submit your work via email to fword.efem@criaw-icref and include in the subject line: F-Word Contribution.

Applications will be accepted from May 4, 2020 to June 1, 2020 @ 11:59PM EDT.
